Therefore 1.74% (Total Investment Charge) of the value of the financial product was incurred as costs relating to the investment of the financial product.

A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER may not necessarily be an accurate indication of future TER's. Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the Financial Product and impacts Financial Product returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of financial product, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER. Inclusive of the TER of 1.66%, a performance fee of 0.44% of the net asset value of the class of Financial Product was recovered.

FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

In last month's report we set out our reasoning as to why we thought the overly bullish forecasts for global equity markets for the year ahead were a little optimistic. Notwithstanding our view, equity markets began the year on an upbeat tone, pausing around mid-month as the novel Coronavirus crisis in China delayed the return of workers from the Lunar New Year holidays. The holiday was extended as authorities battled to fight the spread of infection. Economists estimated that the shutdown of Wuhan where the virus had its epicenter, would hamper important manufacturing supply chains with knock-on consequences for first quarter global GDP at the least.

Markets around the world did price lower, however, the "flow" of the market remains upbeat as the threat of pandemic has reduced. In December we expected a weaker dollar relative to other major currencies, yet this latest crisis has favoured the greenback leading the rand lower in late January. While South African equities were about 2 percent lower for the month, the S&P500 continued its path to higher ground as investors focused even deeper on liquidity and growth.

Prior to month end we reduced exposure to Asia and select companies where we anticipated that the impact of the unfolding scenario would impact earnings growth vectors.

An analysis of factors affecting the adherence to the policy objective is contained in the fund manager commentary. A detailed listing of changes from the previous quarter is available on request from info@miplan.co.za or clientservices@ipmc.co.za

The performance is calculated for the portfolio. The individual investor performance may differ as a result of initial fees, the actual investment date, the date of reinvestment and dividend withholding tax. The fund is invested in portfolios of collective investment schemes that levy their own charges, and which could result in a higher fee structure for the fund. INVESTMENT THEME & REVENUE DRIVERS

Within the current macro environment we remain focused on those companies that are adaptive to a very rapidly changing environment and who are able to survive. Those that don't will unquestionably flounder, with the downside to shareholder value and drawdown risk at asset class level being much greater than many expect. In this context we see companies in the consumer staple, healthcare, technology, consumer discretionary and industrial sectors as the primary drivers of this fund. We see these industries as demonstrating the sort of earnings power we are looking to invest in. In investing in these industries and the companies chosen for the fund, we look to establish a position in the leading players coupled with positions in stocks within the sector that may have a more specialist focus. The assessment of free cash flow, balance sheet strength and margin stability form an important part of the research process. Our assessment of value is based on the degree to which the market has priced in future growth prospects where our investment horizon is typically the next 12 to 36 months. In terms of geographic diversification, our preference at the moment is the US where we see the Fed's policy of accommodative monetary as an underpin to equity values as the economy transitions from central bank support to real earnings growth.
